History - Apartheid

Apartheid, the system of government-sponsored racism in South Africa, ended in 1990 with the prohibition against the African National Congress lifted and the release of all political prisoners. In 1994, South Africa held the first democratic elections, voting in Nelson Mandela as President of South Africa and putting his party, the African National Congress, in control. The anti-apartheid struggle was not limited to South Africa; it also included Angola, Namibia, and Mozambique, and the victory of Nelson Mandela paved the way for future stabilization across Southern Africa.

The end of the apartheid system was brought about, in part, by groups of people working locally around the globe who fought apartheid by endorsing economic sanctions and company boycotts. This collection, broadly defined as the Chicago Anti-Apartheid Movement Collection, is made up of several local groups' records. Chicago held an active role in the anti-apartheid movement, passing sanctions against companies that supported the apartheid government in South Africa, urging the divestment of holdings from South Africa and South African banks, and encouraging other local governments and large cities to do the same. In 1990, Chicago became a Sister Community to Alexandra Township, the largest township of Johannesburg.

The Chicago Anti-Apartheid Movement Collection represents the work of such local Chicago-area groups. Each organization cosponsored other organizations' events, speakers, committees, and protests. Examples of local organizational collaboration include Clergy and Laity Concerned, who fought for divestment sanctions against South Africa and organized boycotts against the Kugerrand and Shell Oil, and Synapses, Inc., a non-profit social justice organization that worked to end racism on a global scale and enact legislation on a local scale, with a focus on Southern Africa and Central America.

Biography - Lisa A. Brock

Lisa Ann Brock, Ph.D. is currently the Academic Director of the Arcus Center for Social Justice Leadership at Kalamazoo College, Michigan. She had served as Chair of the Humanities, History, and Social Sciences Department at Columbia College Chicago when she, with others, established the Chicago Anti -Apartheid Movement collection.

She lived in Mozambique as a Fulbright scholar in the 1980s and successfully merged her academic interest with southern African social justice struggles. Her articles on South Africa, Mozambique, African-Americans, Cuba and Blacks in the diaspora have appeared in journals such as Cuban Studies, Contributions in Black Studies, Issue: A Journal of Opinion, Souls, Peace Review, and Tamas: Cultura, Ideologica, Sociedad and in book collections such as Africa's Media Image. Her book, Between Race and Empire: African-Americans and Cubans Before the Cuban Revolution (Temple University Press), was published in 1998 and her writings are regularly a part of the website: AfroCubaweb.

She has served on the planning committees of the African Studies Association, delivered papers at organizational meetings, and serves on the Editorial Collective of the Radical History Review. She lectures and serves as visiting professor at numerous institutions including the University of New Mexico, Clemson, Columbia University, Oberlin College, and others.

About the Collection

The Chicago Anti-Apartheid Movement Collection dates from 1965 to 2009. The collection strength lies in the files of the grassroots organization that formed to protest an international issue and illustrates how grassroots organizations operated to reach a common goal.

Additionally, the collection consists of organizational and administrative records, brochures and fliers, news and journal articles, correspondence, legislation, published reports and findings, publications, posters, audiovisual material, and artifacts including an 11 ft. x 6 ft. banner. The collection also contains material from individual activists in the Writings and Notes series.

Revision Description

Further additions to the collection have also been acquired with rudimentary processing begun: Prexy Nesbitt material in spring and summer, 2010; Orlando Redekopp and Cheryl Johnson-Odim material in winter, 2012. January 2012, June 2013, and July 2017

Accessible Online Material From The Chicago Anti-Apartheid Movement Collection

While the entirety of this collection is available for research in person, portions of it have been digitized and made available online including:

Activists' Oral Histories, 2009-2010

Columbia College Chicago students conducted oral histories during the Spring 2009, Fall 2009, and Spring 2010 semesters for the course, "Oral History: The Art of the Interview" in the Humanities, History & Social Sciences department. This collection includes interviews with members of the Chicago community who participated in local protest organizations against the apartheid movement in Africa.

African Political Posters

Posters collected by Anti-Apartheid activists, including African National Congress (ANC) posters, Mozambique Film Festival posters, maps, and posters educating about social, economic, and political conditions of countries under apartheid governments.

Educational Poster Boards, 1980s-1990s

Chicago Anti-Apartheid activist groups created these poster boards on the Chicago-Alexandra Sister Community Project, the freeing of Nelson Mandela from prison, and the efforts of these groups to help educate crowds at Chicagoland events and rallies to protest apartheid.

Title: African Activist Database

The African Activist Archive Project seeks to preserve for history the record of activities of U.S. organizations and individuals that supported African struggles for freedom and had a significant collective impact on U.S. policy during the period 1950-1994. One of the significant U.S. political movements in second half of the twentieth century, it included community activists, students, faculty, churches, unions, city and county councils, state governments, and others. This democratization of foreign policy was unprecedented and it is important that the lessons learned be documented for the benefit of ongoing social justice activism.
