Title:	Cheryl Johnson-Odim Collection, 1967-1990
ID:	1000.03.02
Date [inclusive]:	1967-1990
Physical Description:	2.60 Cubic Feet Two (2) record boxes
Language of the Material:	English
Abstract:	An element of the Chicago Anti-Apartheid Movement Collection, the Cheryl Johnson-Odim Collection is comprised of materials related to Dr. Johnson-Odim's time as a community activist. During this period, she campaigned against the South African policy of apartheid through various grassroots organizations, bringing awareness to the Chicagoland area about the injustices committed there. In addition to documents created by the daily activities of those groups, the collection has materials Dr. Johnson-Odim used for her own reference, including United Nations reports and newspaper and magazine articles. The collection also has materials which provide a general background on apartheid and life for people of color in South Africa.

Biography - Cheryl Johnson-Odim

Cheryl Johnson-Odim was born in 1948 in Ohio and spent most of her childhood in New York. She was first introduced to the injustices of apartheid in South Africa in 1963, when her school music teacher brought her to sing on a radio show with Harry Belafonte, with whom he was friends. Belafonte, who was already active in anti-apartheid movements, brought Johnson-Odim and her classmates along to a performance by a troupe of South African dancers whose United States tour he was sponsoring.

She studied at the City College of New York before transferring to Youngstown State University in Ohio, and did her graduate studies at Northwestern University. A Fulbright Fellowship to Nigeria in 1975 cemented her desire to study African history. Johnson-Odim has been active in higher education in Chicago since the 1970s, working as a professor at Northwestern University and Loyola University, a dean at Columbia College Chicago, and most recently as provost of Dominican University in River Forest, Illinois.

History - Apartheid

Between 1948 and 1994, South Africa's government adhered to a policy of apartheid. Under this policy, white South Africans had privileges and powers that black, Asian, and mixed-race South Africans did not. These privileges included the right to vote, access to education and careers, and ownership of most of the country's land. South Africans of color, particularly black South Africans, suffered greatly under apartheid. They had reduced access to education, limited job and housing opportunities, and faced severe penalties if they spoke out against government policies. Changes in South African leadership allowed the de-escalation of apartheid beginning in the late 1980s, and the nation had its first democratic elections in 1994.

History - Coalition for Illinois Divestment from South Africa (CIDSAs)

CIDSAs, or the Coalition for Illinois Divestment from South Africa, was formed by an interracial group in the spring of 1983. Their goals were to convince the state to stop investing in South African industries, both through portions of pension funds being removed from the nation and the refusal to buy South African products, particularly steel. They traveled around the state promoting divestment, with the support of politicians like Charlie Hayes and Carol Moseley Braun. CIDSAs also worked with student groups in universities, Chicago city aldermen, and city unions, giving workshops on apartheid and the benefits of divestment. While the state of Illinois never completed divestment from South Africa, CIDSAs did convince it to cease using South African steel.

History - Free South Africa Movement

The Free South Africa movement began in 1984 as another organization that campaigned against apartheid in South Africa. It had its roots in the TransAfrica organization, and was started after TransAfrica founder Randall Robinson and several co-activists were arrested for refusing to leave the South African embassy. Members included career activists and politicians, and a group from the organization were members of the Trinity United Church of Christ on Chicago's South Side. Pastor Jeremiah Wright was one of the first religious figures in Chicago to support Free South Africa.

History - Chicago Committee in Solidarity with South Africa (CCISSA)

CCISSA, or the Chicago Committee in Solidarity with South Africa, was formed in March 1987. It was a reorganization of CIDsA after the state of Illinois passed legislation moving towards divestment from South Africa. The group continued to raise awareness about the situation of people of color in South Africa through events and newsletter updates.

History - United Nations Centre Against Apartheid

The United Nations Centre Against Apartheid was formed in 1976 to actively work against apartheid in South Africa, and grew out of previous special committees on the same topic. For nearly the next two decades, the Centre gathered research about life in that country and published it for activist and government use. The Centre also frequently published lists of third party resources on South Africa, as well as lists of athletes and entertainers who appeared in South Africa.

About the Collection

The Cheryl Johnson-Odim Collection dates from 1967 to 1990 (mostly 1980s) in 2.60 cubic feet and its strength lies in Johnson-Odim's documents and research on apartheid and anti-apartheid activism.

In addition, the collection includes records created in the day to day activities of her work, and articles, papers, and reference materials she used to supplement her knowledge.

Collection Arrangement

---

The Cheryl Johnson-Odim Collection has been organized into five series and four subseries:

Series 1: TransAfrica Chicago, 1981-1987

Series 2: CIDsA, 1982-1989

Series 3: CCISSA, 1985-1989

Series 4: Other Countries, Organizations, & Literature, 1967-1990

Subseries 1: Organization, 1967-1990

Subseries 2: Other Country Files, 1978-1989

Subseries 3: Publications & Clippings, 1972-1990

Subseries 4: United Nations Centre Against Apartheid, 1979-1986

Series 5: General Apartheid Literature, 1977-1986

The first three series are arranged chronologically by date of Johnson-Odim's involvement in the organization. The fourth and fifth series reflect the original order of the papers. The subseries and folders were arranged alphabetically.

Title: African Activist Database

The African Activist Archive Project seeks to preserve for history the record of activities of U.S. organizations and individuals that supported African struggles for freedom and had a significant collective impact on U.S. policy during the period 1950-1994. One of the significant U.S. political movements in second half of the twentieth century, it included community activists, students, faculty, churches, unions, city and county councils, state governments, and others. This democratization of foreign policy was unprecedented and it is important that the lessons learned be documented for the benefit of ongoing social justice activism.
