FOREWORD

What is public opinion? Who creates it?
Whose thinking makes up public thought?

Public judgments are a most interesting subject for study and observation.

In the program presented this year the officers of Phi Sigma invite the membership to participate in a review of public judgments. We are to study some American careers which some of the public think have not been treated fairly by the rest of the public.

The list of books found on another page is offered with reticence. Surely it is not complete and it may not be wisely compiled. It is intended to be suggestive and to afford a starting place for the reader.
