Distinguished Honors

A Celebration of Artists in Human Service

Doctorates to be Conferred at Commencement Exercises, June 1, 2002

Each year Columbia College Chicago honors outstanding individuals in the arts, education, politics, and public information, people who have engaged their great talents in important human service and whose life work and example embody the College's ideals and spirit.

Lewis Manilow

In awarding the National Medal of Arts, conferred by President Clinton on December 20, 2000, the following statement was made.

Lewis Manilow has made significant contributions to the cultural life of Chicago through his considerable philanthropic support, as well as his personal involvement in the creation and growth of numerous visual and performing arts organizations. Most recently, he has realized his 25-year dream of a revitalized Chicago theater district, with the opening of the new Goodman Theatre, of which he is honorary president, on the street now called "Lewis Manilow Place." He is one of the nation's leading collectors of contemporary art and frequently opens his collection to visitors, particularly art students. A founder and major donor of Chicago's Museum of Contemporary art, Manilow served as its president from 1976-81 and remains a trustee. He has donated numerous contemporary art works to the Art Institute of Chicago, where he is also a trustee. Manilow established the Nathan Manilow Sculpture park, named for his father, and donated major works by Bruce Nauman, Martin Puryear, Mark di Suvero and Mary Miss. He provided a rent-free home for the fledgling Randolph Street gallery, Chicago's leading alternative space for visual and performing artists. A 10-year member of the Advisory Board of the Renaissance Society, he has supported exhibitions as well as various publications and artists' books. His newest projects are to convert an abandoned bus terminal into a multi-purpose visual arts center and to develop an international art magazine concentrating on the Greater Midwest.

Mr. Manilow has been very active politically and was President Clinton's national vice-chair and Illinois Finance Chair in 1992. He was a member of the Executive Committee of the Chicago Community Trust for 5 years. He has practiced law in Chicago, developed real estate and has been Chairman of the Board of an international telecommunications company. He received an Honorary Doctor of Humane Letters from Governors State University in 1996.
